

The Editorial Board welcomes scholarly papers on the history and archaeology of Anatolia and adjacent regions, from prehistory to the Ottoman era.

Submitted articles are subject to peer-review.

Language

Articles should be written in correct French, German or English (please use either US or UK spelling consistently), and should be preceded by an abstract in correct English.

If you are not a native speaker, please have your text corrected by a native speaker before submission.

Elements of an article

- Title (and optional subtitle)
- Name(s) of the author(s); affiliation and contact details in footnote
- Abstract in English, 200 to 300 words
- Article text (in French, German, US English, or UK English), including optional figures and/or small tables and graphs
- Bibliography or list of references
- Optional plates, appendices, large tables and graphs

(Sub)headings

Paragraph headings should be indicated; max. three levels may be used:

- Heading, level 1
(will appear formatted in SMALL CAPITALS);
- Subheading, level 2
(will appear formatted in bold);
- Subheading, level 3
(will appear formatted in italics).

Reference style

References may appear either in numbered footnotes or between brackets, e.g. (Grayson 1991: 000, Fig. 0). Endnotes are not to be used. The first footnote, indicated by an * asterisk, should provide the author's affiliation and contact details. To distinguish the affiliations of multiple authors, use initials rather than full names.

Articles should include a bibliography or (a list of) references, listing in full all used publications.

Authors' last names are set in small capitals. Journal names are set in italics; all other elements (incl. titles of monographs, series, etc.) are set in roman text. Publications that have been submitted, but have not yet appeared are listed as "forthcoming" or "in press". If an author has more than one publication in a given year, the publications are distinguished by letters: [Author], [year]a; [Author], [year]b; etc. Page numbers are mentioned in full, e.g. 204-216 (not: 204-16). The first author is mentioned first by family name, followed by initials. All subsequent authors are mentioned by initials and family name.
